

Sensory Baskets

It can be common for babies to not be too fond of tummy time. Nora was definitely one of these babies! Keep things interesting for them. Take a small basket and fill it with all sorts of colorful and objects you can find around your house or classroom. It could be as simple as shiny and light up objects (metal measuring spoon set, a small handheld mirror, a large bouncy ball with lights in it). You really just have to pinpoint what captivates your baby and catches their eye and find different objects that fall into that.

No matter what objects you add to their basket, be sure there are always supervised while playing with them.
